

PHYSICAL HEALTH

The two fundamental underpinning requirements for resilience are being able to care for yourself and being prepared to ask for and accept help when you need to.

There is a lot of material available to support activities with young people around their levels of exercise and diet, so we have included just one activity that will help young people to assess whether their lifestyle is healthy.